Comment Of The Day

HK Products

It is a pity that the idea of a Federation of Industries has dropped into the background, a pity that pressure has not been put upon those who at least like it to come to a decision. Because Hongkong cannot get on in a world of rising industrial standards and intensifying competition without it. Today, a large number of Hongkong companies are well-known and trusted abroad. But many of our products are thought of as cheap and nasty. And cheap badly-made goods pull down our reputation. What we need is to be able to send abroad goods stamped with the name of Hongkong, certain that they are going to satisfy customers and make them come back for more.

At the CMA exhibition which opened yesterday, good and inferior quality goods went on sale. Some were so poorly finished that they bring discredit not only to the manufacturers but reflect on the organisers of the exhibition and on the Colony's industrial reputation. If this is what we send abroad we cannot hope for a favourable name. If this is what we put on show, trade promotion is wasted effort.

Bigger Factories.

UNFORTUNATELY Government trade promotion is important. It acts on behalf of industry as a whole so that all may benefit. It is a pity that it cannot promote only those goods which will bring credit to Hongkong. If the Federation is formed it will either take over promotion entirely or will share largely in it. And it will have to insist on higher standards.

The Governor has spoken of the need to improve efficiency. This advice is meant not only for large factory owners but for the many small-scale manufacturers as well. Hongkong has read of rooftop factories, of verandah factories — and there are hundreds of them. The Chinese Manufacturers Association could do these people and the Colony a good turn by promoting mergers between small units turning out similar products. An industrial bank could advance money to build bigger factories. Government could make sure land is available.

Inspection Needed

THIS is a move Government ought to encourage. The small factory today is most vulnerable. Overseas competition, rising material and labour costs and often poor standards combine to make his lot difficult. The process of modernising and streamlining our industry must therefore include promoting bigger industrial units and in the absence of a Federation, the CMA, backed by Government, could take the initiative.

If it is necessary to deplore the poor quality of some of our products, it is only fair to compliment the many exhibitors on the initiative and enterprise they have shown in designing stalls and displays. Here is evidence that industry is taking trouble to sell its goods and to make them attractive. But the CMA would be wise next year to establish a standards committee to inspect the quality of all goods going on show. This is the Colony's shop window. Our aim must be to show and sell only the best.

OPENING BATSMEN'S FALL WITH ONLY 16 RUNS ON BOARD ENGLAND'S BAD START

Six Wickets For 83 At Tea Break

Brisbane, Dec. 5.

England, after winning the toss, made a disastrous start in the first Test match against Australia here today, having lost both their opening batsmen — Richardson and Milton — for only 36 at lunch.

By tea, four more wickets had fallen for the addition of only 47 runs.

England has omitted Frank Tyson from the 12 originally chosen for the match, while Australia has made Bobby Simpson 12th man. This means that Peter Loader and Brian Statham will be the speed bowlers for England.

The teams are:

AUSTRALIA: Richie Benaud, Peter Burge, Jim Burke, Alan Davidson, Tom Grout, Neil Harvey, Lindsay Klene, Colin McDonald, Ian Meckiff, Norman O'Neill and Ken Mackay.

Twelfth man: Bobby Simpson.

ENGLAND: Peter May (Captain), Colin Cowdry, Trevor Bulley, Godfrey Evans, Peter Richardson, Tom Graveney, Jim Laker, Tony Lock, Arthur Milton, Brian Statham and Peter Loader.

Twelfth man: Willie Watson.

The Australians obtained both their successes at 16, when Meckiff yorked Milton for five and then Richardson edged Davidson to Mackay after scoring 11.

The not out batsmen at the tea-break adjournment were Graveney 9 and May, 10.

Lucky Escape

At 10 England had a lucky escape when Norman O'Neill missed a fairly easy catch in the slips from Graveney off Davidson.

Bowled used only three bowlers this morning — paceman Alan Davidson and Ian Meckiff, and Ken Mackay — and soon attacking field of three slips, a gulley, a point, a short fine leg and a backward square leg throughout the morning.

Davidson was the best bowler of the trio, his swingers often having the batsmen in difficulties. Meckiff, with a 14 to 15 yard run, wasted too many balls.

Richardson opened England's scoring in a tense atmosphere with a single off Davidson's last ball of the first over, and then got four off Meckiff in the next over when he sent the third ball between slip and gulley to the tapes.

Davidson then bowled a maiden to Milton.

After the first four overs England were 10 without loss, all scored by Richardson.

Appeared Confident

Milton opened his account with a single off the last ball of Davidson's third over.

Both batsmen appeared confident, and up to this stage only Richardson had been beaten once — by Davidson.

Churchill's Statue Described As 'Gorilla-Like'

London, Dec. 4. Controversy over a statue of Sir Winston Churchill, due to be erected and unveiled in the statesman's constituency in Woodford, Essex, next spring, has flared up with some people describing it as "gorilla-like," a caricature" and "a disgrace."

The sculptor of the more than life-size statue, 38-year-old David McFall, replied to criticisms today by saying that he had tried to portray Sir Winston Churchill as a man of intellect and poet of fortitude.

The adverse criticisms have come from some of the Woodford constituents, who have subscribed to the fund for the cost of the statue.—China Mail Special.

Old Refugees Leave For New Life In Europe

Sixty-one White Russian refugees with an average age of 70 left Hongkong by special chartered plane for Paris this morning to be resettled in Europe.

The plane was chartered by the Inter-Governmental Committee for European Migration (ICEM).

Oldest of the group was 83-year-old Maria Milidoss who is bound for Ireland.

Medical Officer

The party was accompanied by one of the Migration Committee's medical officers. Sixty are difficult cases; refugees afflicted with T.B., old or chronically sick, who will receive permanent care in homes and institutions in Belgium, Denmark, France, Ireland, Italy, Sweden and Switzerland.

Mr Kenneth Summers, special representative of the International Refugee Organisation and member of his staff were at the airport to see the party off.

According to a France-Press report from Geneva, in addition, two aircraft, each providing seats for some 50 difficult cases, will shortly be made available by the British Government.

Small Groups

These are expected to reach Europe around December 18, 1958 and January 6, 1959, respectively.

Small groups of refugees will be flown out by the Royal Air Force from Hongkong to Singapore, where they will assemble and then be flown to Europe.

On November 1, 1958, 1,060 refugees of European origin, still on the mainland of China, had appealed to the joint representative in Hongkong of the Inter-Governmental Committee for European Migration and the Office of the High Commissioner for Refugees for assistance towards their resettlement.

Received Visas

Half of them had already received visas from the Communist Chinese Government, mainly due to the voluntary agencies working on their behalf.

There are known to be some 733 identified difficult cases, 74 family members among those still on the mainland, but their total number is estimated to be around one thousand.

The great majority are former Russians and their dependants who left their homeland during and after the 1917 Russian revolution and settled in Manchuria and Northern China.

MYSTERIOUS SPACE SIGNALS COMING FROM SPUTNIK III

Says Scientist

San Antonio, Dec. 4. A San Antonio scientist said today the "mysterious radio signal from space" recorded here yesterday came from a powerful solar battery recharging on Russia's third Sputnik.

Dr Paul Sease, head of moonwatch operations at Trinity University, said: "Computations received from Cambridge, Massachusetts, indicate the mysterious beeps were signals from the Sputnik and not from any known satellite as originally believed."

He said the signals were touched off by occasional recharging of the powerful solar battery aboard the Sputnik.

Period Cycle

A moonwatch team here made a recording of the radio signal from space last night, noted its period cycle, and concluded it must be coming from an unidentified, man-made satellite.

A moonwatch team here made a recording of the radio signal from space last night, noted its period cycle, and concluded it must be coming from an unidentified, man-made satellite.

A day earlier scientists in Sunnyvale, California, who first heard the signal on November 26, reported it definitely was not coming from any known satellite now circling the Earth.

But Dr Sease said the new computations ruled out the possibility of the signals coming from an unknown satellite.

He said the signal consisted of a constant "beep-beep," in a series of two each, similar to that sent out by the first Sputnik.

Intervals

Dr Sease said the broadcast appeared to come in intervals of about one hour and 40 minutes and the signal was right on the Russian frequency of 20,004.

He said his team picked up the sound twice on Tuesday night.

After the first four overs England were 10 without loss, all scored by Richardson.

Appeared Confident

Milton opened his account with a single off the last ball of Davidson's third over.

New York, Dec. 4. Army researchers are working on a non-lethal immobilising gas that could rob an enemy army of the will to fight, an ordnance official has disclosed.

$18,000 Robbery In Hongkong

Two masked men, one of them armed with a knife, stole cash and jewellery worth about $18,000 when they ransacked the second floor flat of No. 25, Lyttelton Road, Upper Level District, early this morning.

The men entered the premises through the main door at about 6 o'clock. The four people in the flat at the time — a man and three women — were threatened and their hands bound with wire before the robbers ransacked the premises. Articles stolen included cheques and wrist watches.

Police investigations are in progress.

AIRLINER WITH 21 PEOPLE MISSING

Madrid, Dec. 4. Little hope remained tonight for a Spanish airliner with 21 passengers and crew aboard which has been overdue on a flight from Vigo (north-west Spain) to Madrid.

The plane carried only enough fuel for five hours. It took off from Vigo with 16 passengers aboard and a crew of five including the air hostess.

ONLY HOPE

The only remaining hope is that the aircraft, a four-engine Languedoc belonging to the Aviaco Company may have made forced landing somewhere along its route. It was piloted by the company's chief pilot with 15,000 flying hours to his credit.

The last that was heard of the plane was when it flew over Salamanca at the scheduled time. Weather conditions over the route were cloudy but not particularly bad except in the Madrid area where storms affected air traffic all afternoon and evening.

'Sacred Flame' Dated But Impressive

By JOHN LUFT

The first thing a critic should ask himself when going to see a play is what is the playwright trying to do. As "The Sacred Flame" is a dated play (but I hasten to add that the Garrison Players have removed the dating clichés) we have to look at the Somerset Maugham of thirty years ago.

It was the period when "The Bright Young Things" were beginning to fade; when the line "Yes, I'm going to have a baby" no longer shocked Charing Cross Road.

In fact, at the dawn of the period when at last the adult action of the British Isles acknowledged that the primitive qualities of procreation still maintain the survival of the human race.

All this must seem dreadfully old fashioned to the young playgoer of today, but yesterday, it seemed daring, terribly advanced, and many playwrights were pilloried before they got away with it.

Noel Coward was the high priest of the adventurous younger set, and although Somerset Maugham agreed with many of Mr. Coward's theories he did not like the way Mr. Coward went about it.

Dull People

Maugham said that if you are going to have natural dialogue on the stage, dull people saying dull things, then the only thing to do is to stay away from the theatre and go to any restaurant and listen to people talking.

On the other hand, if you are going to have ordinary everyday dialogue, then have exceptional people. Or if you have ordinary people, then have exceptional dialogue. In other words, put lyrical prose into the mouths of suburban housewives.

Thus we get "The Sacred Flame."

Now, I don't try to give advice as to what our local companies should play, that is their affair, but I feel in writing a play like "The Sacred Flame" it is as well to know what you are about.

Regarding production, I see that Nancy O'Connell kept more or less to the script for business. The script has Ian Verger break down and cry.

This seems to me a bit artificial as though the manner were out of step with the dialogue. That is Maugham's fault assuming my reactions were those generally felt.

Squirming

At any rate, I felt myself squirming in my seat as if I had been trapped in the room where I had no business to be. I have remarked before on Ian Verger's ability which I rate very high. But I feel he could have improved a very good performance had he studied the part more and obtained a little of the high spirited Maurice Tabart's environment.

To Maugham, he was one of those young men who flew bits of wood stuck together with chewing gum. An eagle, winged in mid-flight. I say this with a genuine desire to help. Three successes in a row can give overconfidence, and I saw that last night.

For instance, a clever study of the part would have told Ian Verger that he could move, but not bounce in the invalid chair. He was too animated physically; the part requires a spiritual animation only.

Thus, the face, not the body, responds. Nevertheless, a performance to mark.

The row in front of me found some professional critics from the Queen Mary Hospital, and they deplored the ethics of Betty Roberts, the Nurse Wayland of the play.

But Maugham was a doctor, and Nurse Wayland was sketched from life.

Pure Ham

Maugham gives her some lines that are pure ham, yet put over 'as' Betty Roberts put them over, with a sort of 'Let's have a showbiz' attitude; they were very effective.

But the stereotyped business of standing square front stage, and tossing the head from right to left, had me wishing for more variety in her gestures.

Thinking all round, it was a performance you rarely find on the amateur stage, and this was the line was filled out with suppressed laughter was good, very good.

Which brings us to Janet Tomblin. I must admit, this role had most of my attention, for although most people will not agree, I think that it is

U.S. JEW HATING GROUP ALLEGED

Atlanta, Dec. 4. An FBI undercover agent testified today that at least three of the five men indicted for bombing a Jewish temple in Atlanta were members of a national conspiracy whose aim was extermination of Jews.

The testimony was part of the State's charge that George Allen Bright, first of the men to stand trial, was a fanatic anti-Semite whose strong racial feelings led to the October 12 dynamiting.

Conviction carries a possible death sentence.

Leslie E. Rogers, an Atlanta janitorial services contractor, said he attended meetings of the racial group earlier this year while acting as an undercover agent for the FBI.

"The avowed purpose of the party," Rogers said, "was extermination of Jews and expulsion of Jews from responsible positions in the U.S. Government, as I understand it."

Meetings of the local group were confined to four or five members, he said.

At these meetings they would discuss various activities such as dissemination of literature, methods of spreading their hate doctrine and, on several occasions, treatment of Jews.

At one meeting, he said, members received a report on more than 100 Jews burned alive during the Hungarian revolt last year.

The listeners expressed "glee," he said, and Bright later allegedly commented:

"If local conditions ever develop, we will go to our homes and get guns, and shoot Jews down in the streets, stores and homes . . . wherever we find them." —U.P.I.

Battle In Commons On Berlin Policy

Sandys: "No Better
Ally Today Than A Strong Germany"

London, Dec. 4.

The Defence Minister, Mr Duncan Sandys said tonight that the danger to peace "comes now not from the Germans but from the Russians," and stressed Germany's part as an ally of the West.

Speaking in the House of Commons, he said, "I say, without qualification, I am glad that in the present dangerous situation we have Germany as our ally. She has become one of the main pillars of the Western Alliance and the more efficient her armies can be made, the better it will be for the peace and safety of Europe."

Whatever may have happened in the past, Germany today is our firm friend and ally and she enjoys our confidence.

We are glad to see the progress of the new German Army and we welcome the strength it brings to NATO. Nuclear warheads will remain in American custody but in emergency they will be issued by the American forces from their stockpile on the continent."

Mr Sandys said on the Berlin question the allies should stand

Adenauer Cheered In Berlin

Berlin, Dec. 4.

The West German Chancellor, Dr Konrad Adenauer, told an election meeting here tonight that every vote against the Socialist Unity (Communist) Party in Sunday's elections was a vote against the Soviet proposals on Berlin.

He added that every vote for his Christian Democratic Party, now the second largest party in the city, would be a vote for the continuation of the "protective shield" which the Western Alliance was holding over both West Berlin and West Germany.

The Chancellor was noisily applauded by the 800 people who crowded into a small beerhall in a working class district near the East-West Berlin border to hear him speak.—Reuter.

Fog Masks British Airfields

London, Dec. 4.

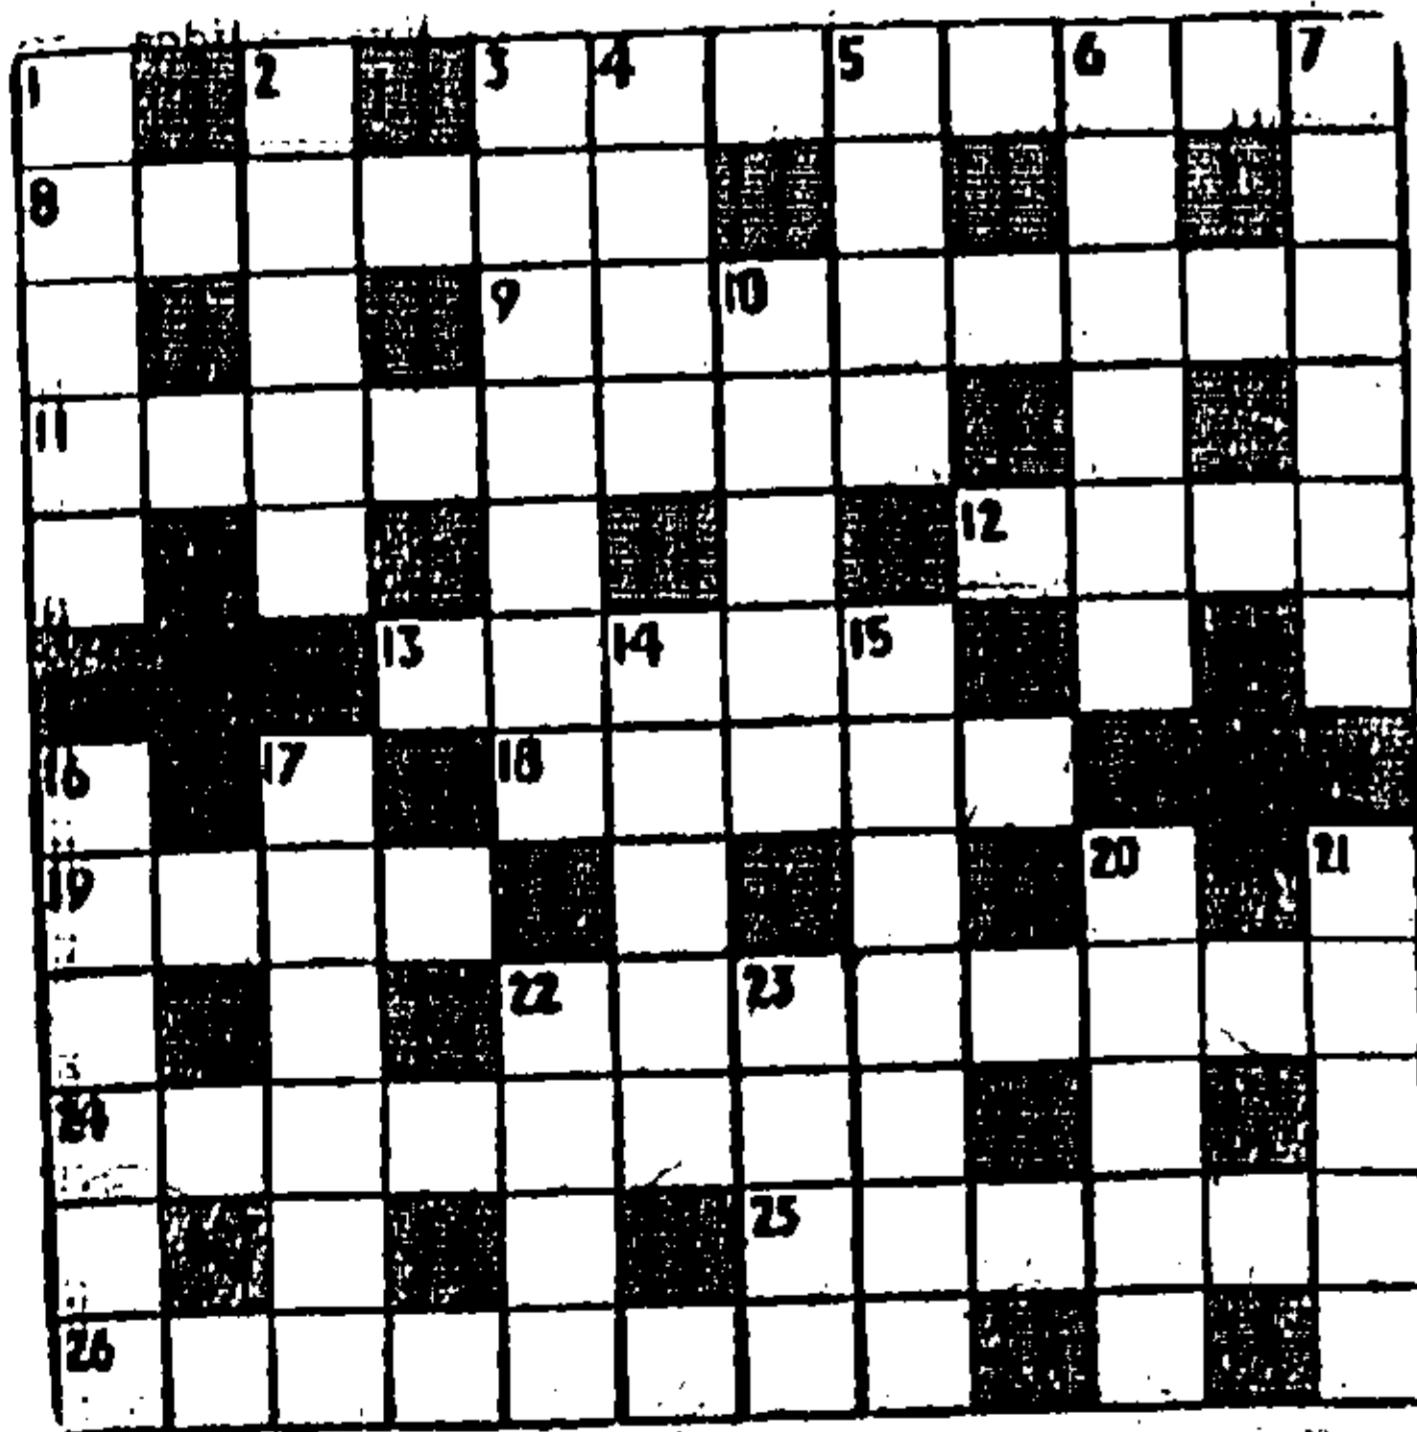

One of the thickest fog in years today interrupted air traffic and brought travel by road and rail almost to a standstill in southern England.

No flights were taken off after midnight last night from London and planes on their way here had to be detoured to other fields.

The weather report offered no relief, and in fact it predicted that the fog would grow worse tonight.

The Duke of Edinburgh, who was to have returned to London today, had to remain temporarily in Germany, where he was visiting members of his family.—France-Presse.

Bevan: "It Alarms
The Russians. It
Alarms Me Too!"

London, Dec. 4.

It is time that Britain took the initiative on the German problem, Aneurin Bevan, Labour's "shadow foreign minister", told the House of Commons today.

Answering Mr Selwyn Lloyd's statement on foreign affairs, Mr Bevan raised Labour cheers in saying: "Is it not time that we got off the escalator and started to walk, because the escalator is carrying us inevitably to destruction and everybody is beginning to develop a sense of inevitability."

The time has long past when Britain should rise to its feet and give the world the lead that the world is now asking for."

Earlier, Mr Bevan had said: "We believe the Russian proposal to convert West Berlin into a free city is impracticable and also unacceptable. We do not believe—frankly—I do not believe anyhow that it is a serious proposal—but we do not believe the present situation is acceptable either."

"So long as Berlin is in its present anomalous position, it is always going to be a source of trouble in Europe. But we consider something more has to be done."

"The solution of the problem of Berlin is a solution of the German problem and the solution of the German problem is a solution of the European problem."

Provocative

Mr Bevan added that Mr Khrushchev was quite right when he said, in his note, that the increased rearming of Western Germany was a source of profound alarm to Poland and Russia. "It alarms me," said Mr Bevan.

"Could anything be more provocative than Dr Adenauer's statement that he was not yet ready to discuss the future of Germany with the Russians, because they were not yet ready to raise the problem of Germany's eastern frontiers?" Bevan asked.

In the first instance, we should have a four-power conference with the Russians, which the Russians have invited. If you are to have the reunification of Germany, which would assimilate the Berlin problem, it must be assumed that such a reunited Germany should not join the Nazi alliance.

"I cannot see how we would be weakened if there were disengagement throughout that area. We should lose some military formations but we should gain incomparably in the pacification of the whole area."

"What we are seeking is not to be strong but strong enough to be peaceful"—France-Presse.

Let The Germans Fix It

London, Dec. 4.

Viscount Hinchliffe, frequently termed the "Enfant terrible" of the British Conservative Party, suggested today that allied and Soviet forces should be withdrawn from Berlin and a provisional German government set up.

Hinchliffe, speaking in the House of Commons, said the Government should be composed of officials of East and West Germany. That the government would assume the functions now experienced by the East-West Kommandantur. It would later handle trade between the two parts of Germany, and finally prepare all-German elections, he said.

In a proposal similar to the Polish "Rapacis plan," Hinchliffe said Allied forces in Germany and Soviet forces in East Germany, Poland and Czechoslovakia, should be reduced by half.

Attacking the policy of the Atlantic Alliance and of British Defence Minister, Duncan Sandys, Hinchliffe said the Atlantic powers had need of more culture and less science, more political "sense" and less militarism.—France-Presse.

If Field Marshal Lord Montgomery's forthcoming television series on the battles of the last war prove controversial, as is expected, he will not retract one word of it.

The Cash Of British Teenagers

Brighton, Dec. 4.

Britain's working teenagers spend quite a large amount of their money on dressing up in order to impress other teenagers, a management conference was told here.

Mr Mark Abrams, Managing Director of a research firm, told a British Institute of Management Conference that an estimated 4,200,000 working teenagers in this country were drawing about £1,480 million a year.

They were spending roughly 60 per cent of it.

Nearly a quarter of their uncommitted money went on clothing and footwear, 14 per cent on drinks and tobacco, and 12 per cent on sweets, soft drinks and snacks in cafés and restaurants.

Mr Abrams continued: "A good share of the balance goes on pleasures of addiction—buying and playing 'pop' records, reading romantic magazines and fiction paperbacks, going to the cinema and dancehall."

On Tuesday, the Prime Minister, Mr Harold Macmillan, will be asked to set up an official inquiry into the conduct of the Suez operations "in view of the damage to this country's military reputation caused by allegations of the unpreparedness of the armed forces."

The Prime Minister will also be asked to publish an official report on allegations that British ministers were informed in advance of Israel's intention to attack Egypt with the assistance of France.—China Mail Special.

While rehearsing the programmes—which will begin on December 7—here today he declared: "Just as in my book, I have tried to tell the truth about what I think happened."

"All my life I have been completely unmoved by criticism. If you worry about it you go mad. You just make your decision and do what you think is right."

The former Deputy Supreme Commander in Europe said he thought his six weekly programmes would be important for letting the ordinary soldier know how battles were planned and why they were fought the way they were.

On his book he said: "I would not change one word of what I wrote. I would write the same again."—China Mail Special.

Siam Gets Atomic Reactor

New York, Dec. 4.

A 1,000-kilowatt nuclear reactor has been sold to the Thailand Atomic Energy for Peace Commission, Mr Roy T. Hurley, Chairman and President of the Cunard-Wright Corporation, announced today.

The reactor will take two years to complete. It will be installed at Chulalongkorn University, Bangkok.

It will serve as the centre for nuclear science and training in Thailand.—UPI.

London, Dec. 4.

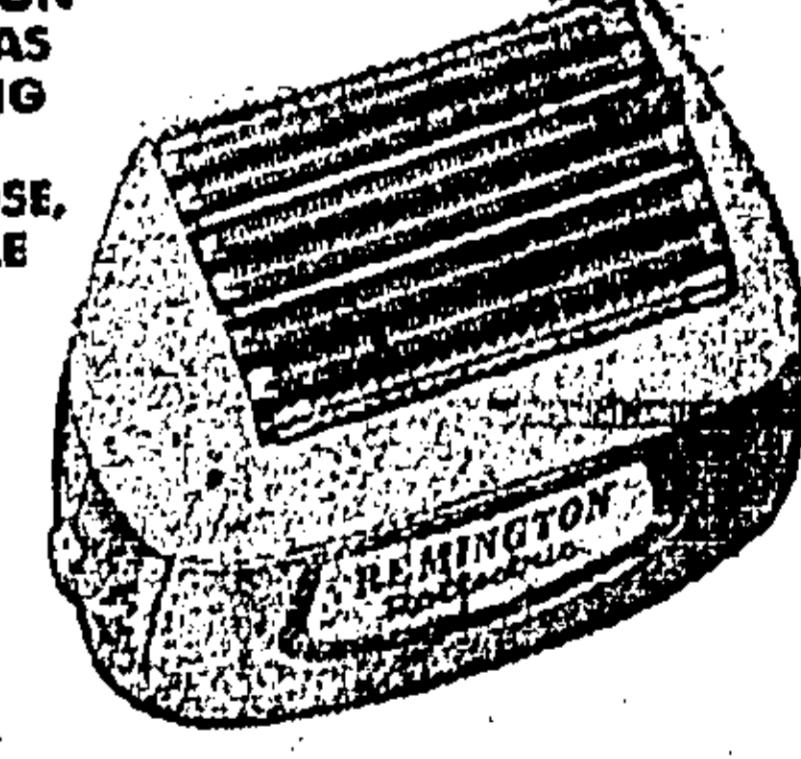

A national search was launched today for two men who tried to steal mail at the Leeds central railway station, Yorkshire, late last night. They were in police uniform.

Of the present five million teenagers, nearly 10 per cent would marry next year, abandon their teenage spending habits and transfer their spending power to the totally different adult market.—China Mail Special.

Christmas Trees

CHRISTMAS trees are scarce in England this year and extra supplies are being obtained as far away as Scotland. The Forestry Commission are supplying wholesale buyers in England with more than 270,000 trees and throughout the British Isles will deliver about 600,000. A Commission official says, "We never have sufficient trees to meet the demand."

Biggest Sweet-eaters

WOMEN in Britain buy more sweets and spend more on them for their families and themselves than anyone else, says a research project. A survey of confectionery-buying habits shows that 57 per cent of all expenditure on chocolate and sugar confectionery is made by women, housewives accounting for 30 per cent of the total. In the market where total purchases are estimated to amount to £250 million annually, women spent an average of approximately £8.33 a week on all confectionery compared with an average weekly expenditure by men of about £2.21.

Monk Takes Seat

A BENEDICTINE monk has been elected in the House of Lord Bishops. Father Gabriele Gelli, who succeeded to the title of Lord Vaux of Harrowden and Baron of the death of his mother who was a baroness in her own right, Father Gelli is now the third priest at St Albans Church, Watlington, Lancashire. He will be prevented by his church duties from regular attendance in the House but he says, "I shall attend on occasions when I feel I can make a useful contribution to its deliberations and put any specialised knowledge I may have at the disposal of the House."

Catch Of His Life

FISHING from the beach at Eastbourne, Sussex, Mr John Sheppard, of Kingston Road, Eastbourne, caught a cod weighing 20 pounds, 14 ounces on a rod and line. It took him 10 minutes to land it using a rod which he won recently as a prize at Eastbourne Sea Angling Festival. Mr Sheppard has been angling since he was 10 years old. He said, "I am now 52 and this is the catch of my life." Asked what would happen to the fish, he said, "I am going to cut it up and give custards to my friends. I am a butcher and I don't like fish."

Boy Gangsters Angry Cops

ALL over New York, detectives like Big Mac and Timmy are probing, sifting, listening for snatches of conversations—and building up a million-card file on the city's young hoodlums in Captain Ludwig's office.

They get to know about the trouble before it starts. And because they're around the gangs call a "cool"—a truce.

Captain Ludwig told me "We can't take them all to court but every boy spooned to be in other gang's file—even if he's only throwing stones at a lamp post. Little criminals become big criminals."

"There is a pattern with adult felons. They always start with small things like truancy or cheating on a subway fare."

"Three out of our parolees get back in trouble—so it seems common-sense to get at them before the big trouble really starts. When a kid gets tabbed we talk to him, and maybe get his parents down to the station and talk to them."

"The kid knows his name is on the file. It may get him down. If it doesn't and his name keeps coming up, we know the pattern of his behaviour. If he's in chronic 'toughie' he's in real trouble."

I was shown a confidential file on the gangs—their leaders, headquarters, territory, classification ("social or fighting"), their allies, their enemies.

The police work in co-operation with social agencies. But all the police I spoke to go along with Captain Ludwig.

Kennedy told his men recently: "We are not going to snore our fingers and say boys will be boys. Apply the law and apply it vigorously. It is not your job to become bemused with the vagaries of the why-oh-way school."

"They say some young punk is the product of his environment, who isn't? Lots of us come from broken homes, are we're going to become vengeful and take it out on somebody else."

Why this eruption of wild, adolescent crime?

Nobody in New York can explain it, any more than people in London and others of the world's big cities can explain their teenage crime waves.

But one Negro police lieutenant, with a Joe Louis frame, came near to think, when he spoke of dominating authority in the home, in the school, and from the policeman on the beat.

As Commissioner Kennedy has said: "There were three cops on our post—Casey, Egan and Maloney—who straightened us kids out. Then they'd tell our parents and we got belted again."

"Nobody asked me: 'What are your needs... are you happy?' It was 'Look, bud, do this.' And it you didn't you get belted."

There are deeper problems in this particular city of New York, a city of mixed races... the problems of the hard-pressed minorities.

Negroes, ten per cent of the population, cause thirty per cent of the crime; Puerto Ricans, six per cent of the population, cause ten per cent of the crime.

As I sit in the dollar-laden sophistication of Sardi's, I am thinking of the people who don't want to know what is happening in the shadow of Manhattan. I am thinking, too, of Tim and Big Mac, prowling the 'forcing houses' of crime; of smiling Spider, the knife expert; of a crumpled policeman lying bleeding in a gutter; and of tomorrow's papers that will push death downstage.

I wonder how many other cities across the face of the world may become like this.

Will they wall like New York, until it is almost too late to do anything about it?

Or could they act now... and could they learn something from New York's police about teenage criminals and criminals-in-the-making.

I may be old-fashioned. But I like the sound of those old-time cops with the Irish names—Casey, Egan and Maloney, who kept the kids in their precinct in order.

EX-EOKA GUNMAN TALKS TO ME IN HIS LONDON HOME

My first week back in Britain—by DONALD WISE

Reporter Donald Wise, a week after returning from Cyprus, today presents a disturbing review of news and views on the terror island.

TWO years ago the British Government bought Nicos Evangelides, body and soul, for £8,000 cash tax free. We saved his body from the hangman in Nicosia and in return he gave us the dead body of Afxenthou (then Eoka second-in-command), other live terrorists, a quantity of weapons, and considerable intelligence about the organisation.

Nicos was blasted out of an Eoka hideout by troops and presented a traitor's life to a hero's death.

He left Cyprus and now lives in a grimy suburb of North London.

On one wall inside his semi-detached house hangs a picture of the Queen, side by side with a romanticised coloured portrait of Nicos in his gun-toting days in Eoka. Outside a spanking new £1,100 car sits under a dust-cover.

Nicos is doing well. He works in a bottle factory. And like many other Greek Cypriots in London he says: "I still hope Eoka will win."

Perhaps that is to square his conscience. Since he sold everything else hope is all he has left.

Other Cypriots in London have told me in the past week they are proud that we have failed to smash Eoka in three years with 30,000 troops quartering the island for their gunmen.

Said one: "I pay £10 a week income tax here. It is a free country. Why shouldn't I cheer for Eoka?"

It seems that an impressive contribution to the tax collector absolves him from any shame for Eoka murders committed by his countrymen in the name of freedom for Cyprus.

"You have more people killed by traffic on the Great West Road in a month," he added wryly.

I AM convinced that Cypriots in Britain do NOT contribute funds to Eoka, but they do send money to relatives suffering financial hardship under the curfews.

Hundreds of Cypriots arrive here every week to get away from Eoka.

Our Cypriot community is sitting the Cyprus war out here with their hearts in the wrong place.

I found the talk against our troops in London cafes is the same as in the coffee shops of Nicosia or Famagusta. With the difference that here gossips feel more comfortable.

"that unless we were able to make more rapid progress on the political front we would become engaged in another full-scale campaign against Eoka all over again."

Right, Eoka used their long breathing space during Sir Hugh Foot's ride-a-white-horse and pressed-palms met-the-people approach to the problem to re-organise terror with deadlier efficiency.

"I have often asked myself, whether I requested to be relieved at the right time. I am sure I did. A new mind and fresh energy were required."

Which does not for one moment mean that he thinks the problems licked him.

He knows he could smash Eoka now HIS way.

He believes it would be disastrous ever to contemplate any sort of truce with Eoka again—in short, no deterrence by violence.

Makarios must be brought back. Give every man and woman a bullet-proof vest. Shoot to kill and keep on shooting. Get out. As a base the place is a dead loss anyway. Send all the wives home.

WHAT
ABOUT
WESTMINSTER

ORD HARDING is one of the few people I have met in England who have any real idea of what is happening in Cyprus.

I spoke to members of Parliament shortly before the Premier made his Cyprus policy statement. One asked me if I thought another Hopkinson-type "Never" Cyprus independence would revitalise the organisation—by its clarity if nothing else.

Another mused over the possibility of adjusting the Turkish minority by shifting large sections of the Greek population off the island to Greece.

A third talked of sending 45,000 Cypriots in Britain back whenever they came.

Retired policemen with years of service in Palestine, India, Malaya, Kenya, and other violent spots have offered me plans for ending the trouble.

He knows he could smash Eoka now HIS way.

He believes it would be disastrous ever to contemplate any sort of truce with Eoka again—in short, no deterrence by violence.

Makarios must be brought back. Give every man and woman a bullet-proof vest. Shoot to kill and keep on shooting. Get out. As a base the place is a dead loss anyway. Send all the wives home.

It is not enough to set about thrashing Eoka. We must hold out some sort of future for Cypriots wherever they are.

They will never lose the self-determination bug. And first man back there will be Evangelides—to square himself with the people he betrayed.

Ignore These Rumours Of Matthews Retiring

THAT DAY IS STILL A LONG WAY OFF

By TOM FINNEY

(Of Preston North End and England)

Once again the critics are trying to "bury" Stanley Matthews . . . the player who forgot to grow old.

The rumours of his retirement were started by the news that Blackpool were prepared to pay big money for another outside-right.

Does this mean that the Matthews era is really ending? I am certain it doesn't.

I think that Blackpool are just looking ahead and signing an understudy who may have to play second-tennis football for several seasons.

There is surely nothing surprising about their willingness to pay big money for such a player. After all, he will one day have to try to replace the Wizard of Dribble.

But, judging by current form, that day is a long way away. For, in my opinion, Stanley Matthews is still the finest ball-player in British football.

Referee's Praise

I remember talking to referee Mr Kelly, after this season's Blackpool-Blackburn match, I mentioned Stan's name and he said: "The Old Man," he said, "could have given them all a yard's start and a beating."

One thing is certain. When he does finally quit football, Stanley Matthews will take the secret of his magic with him.

Like A Novice

But I imagine even he would agree that, on his day, Stanley Matthews was virtually unplayable.

I have seen him make Kohlmeier, Germany's world-class full-back, look like a novice.

I have seen him tantalise Stankovitch to such an extent

Shook His Head

They knew so little about football that they couldn't even recognise him. Yet the name obviously meant so much to them that they just wanted to say they'd talked to him!

One of them asked me where Stanley Matthews was. From two feet away, Stan gently shook his head. So I looked into the far corner of the room and said, quite honestly: "I can't see him."

But I am sure that if they had been genuine fans, the story would have had a different ending.

How much longer will the Matthews saga last?

As long, I think, as he continues to stay at the top. He will never allow himself to fade.

When his powers begin to wane, no one will have to tell him. He'll know it first. And then he will quit.

Night In Brazil

Nowadays every time I hear someone mention his retirement, I think back to a night in Rio de Janeiro during the 1950 World Cup.

We were lazing on the hotel verandah listening to the surf boating on the shore, when Stan asked me, at what age I was thinking of retiring.

Quite forgetting he was then 35, I replied vaguely: "Oh, I suppose around the age of 33 or 34."

There was a long silence. Then he said: "It's not quite so easy as that, Tom. You'll find there's something about the game that makes a man want to linger."

Well, I'm 36 now. And, Stan, I know what you mean . . . all too well!

Greatest Position

He took up the sport here, mainly for the purpose of making friends and his amiable personality has carried him through in this respect with great success. However, his performances at short-stop have already received wide acclaim from the critics and have made him a real favourite with the crowd.

Women Ministers

New York. Women have cracked the profession barriers in engineering and law. They have been accepted as plumbers, bus drivers and U.S. senators. Bank Presidents, brokers and paper hangers. But there is one major field they can not seem to conquer—the Ministry.

In the course of 2,000 years, women have managed to chip away at some of the prejudices against them in the pulpit, but they still have a long way to go to be accepted as preachers.

The National Council of Churches reports in its 1958 yearbook that there are fewer than 7,000 women ministers in the United States, out of a total 108,419 clergymen.

Of these, 5,791 women are ordained or licensed. Only 2,896 actually have pulpits—and these are mainly in small towns.

There are several women circuit riders. They travel from church to church. One drives a station wagon on her circuit. Another paddles a boat from island to island off the coast of Maine. Still another jogs through the northwoods of Michigan on horseback.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

THE nicest thing I can say about North's vulnerable no-trump overcall is that it was unsound. East's two-diamond bid and South's three-club call were each an invitation to the under-taker and West's double of three clubs represented a response from that gentleman.

Actually the penalty was nothing tremendous and it took very good defence to set South two tricks.

West opened his singleton ace of diamonds and continued with the king of hearts. East signalled with the 10 and West properly decided that his partner was showing the queen and not a doubleton. West played a low heart and East was in with the nine.

At this point East came up with a magnificent defensive play. He was sure his partner could ruff a diamond, but he also thought that a spade lead might be necessary to get West out of an end play. Hence East led the six of spades. South played the queen, West the king and dummy the ace.

South got his hand by ruffing a heart and led the queen of clubs. West did not make the mistake of covering with the king and eventually South had to lose two trumps and a spade.

If East had given his partner a diamond ruff, declarer could have got out for down one since eventually West would have had to lead away from his king of spades.

YOUR BIRTHDAY ...By STELLA

FRIDAY, DECEMBER 5

BORN today you have a rather complex personality, since the creative and artistic side of your nature and leader are so intertwined that there appears to be a continual tug-of-war between your two natures. Changeable, you are a little unpredictable and less dependable in your views. Exert caution in marriage. Those born on this date are: Martin Van Buren, U.S. President; Walt Disney, cartoon film producer; Commander George A. Lippert, U.S. Army hero; Armando Diaz, Italian general and statesman.

Knarf opened the door and went in.

"Sit down," said Enrico, motioning with his wing to a perch at the bottom of the cage. "Are you hungry, my friend?" Have some Canary Seeds,"

Knarf thanked Enrico and said he didn't care to have any Canary Seeds.

He had no trouble seeing it was Knarf who was standing on the other side of the door, for Enrico's cage was made of bars and you could look right through them.

Knarf opened the door and went in.

"Sit down," said Enrico, motioning with his wing to a perch at the bottom of the cage. "Are you hungry, my friend?" Have some Canary Seeds,"

Knarf thanked Enrico and said he didn't care to have any Canary Seeds.

"I like it very much," said Knarf, as he sat himself down on the perch at the bottom of the cage. "You've got a beautiful voice."

"But I would like to hear you sing, Enrico," he told him.

"Ah," said Enrico, putting the tip of his wing to his heart, "you like my voice?"

"Thank you," said Enrico. "What song would you like me to sing for you?"

"What song have you got?" asked Knarf.

"I've got lots and lots of songs," replied Enrico.

"Sing any song!" urged Knarf. "I'm sure I'll like it."

But Enrico Canary shook his head.

"No, no," said Enrico. "It isn't raining. No raindrops are falling at all. How can I sing 'Raindrops Are Falling' when it isn't true?"

"I've got another song called, 'The Moon Is Like A Golden Ball,'"

"I think I'd like that song very much," Knarf said.

"That's a lovely song," Knarf exclaimed.

CRAIGENGOWER REGAIN MIXED DOUBLES BADMINTON TITLE

Craigengower Cricket Club last night regained the Colony Badminton senior mixed doubles league title by beating current holders, Chinese YMCA by five matches to four in the final play-off at the Indian Recreation Club.

The Valley Club took the first three games in a row and looked well set for a crushing victory, but a brilliant stand by veteran W. F. Foo in partnership with Miss Tui Yuen-chun prevented a total rout. Two well-earned victories by him and his partner enabled Chinese YMCA to take a fight of it at 3-3 only to see S. K. Wong and Miss W. K. Chan go down in the eighth game of the evening to Wong Wai-hung and Helen Kwong by 14-21 after trailing behind all the way.

For the winners, Chu Sui-wah and Mrs Elvie Tsok were in brilliant form throughout the evening.

The Scores

Following are the full scores: George Ma and Miss Mary Wong (CCC) beat S. K. Wong and Miss W. K. Chan 21-1, lost to Ramon Young and Miss Cynder Ho 10-21, lost to W. F. Foo and Miss Y. C. Tsui 19-24.

Wong Wai-hung and Miss Helen Kwong (CCC) beat Wong and Chan 21-14, beat Young and Ho 21-15, lost to Foo and Tsui 15-21.

Chu Sui-wah and Mrs Elvie Tsok (CCC) beat Wong and Chan 24-19, lost to Young and Ho 8-21, beat Foo and Tsui 21-15.

Saints Take On The Seminoles In Week's Only Senior Game

By "TIME OUT"

The Annual Camps have once again claimed a great percentage of our local softballers and as a result only four games are scheduled for the week-end.

In the only Senior game, the Saints take on the Seminoles.

In the Juniors, the Dodgers and Eagles tangle with the Comets and University nine respectively whilst in the ladies' league the undefeated South China meet the winless Toreros.

Note of the four games should off in this match, the Under-grads will find the going rough.

To get things rolling the undefeated Dodgers, fresh from their convincing 10-0 win over the Cardinals last week, should account for the Comets although the margin of runs is not expected to be more than three or four runs.

Dodgers are in a neck and neck race with the Cheyennes (also undefeated) and should they continue to play ball heads up they could lower the colours of the Cheyennes and take the Pennant.

The Comets are this year's most disappointing club for they have not reached the standard of play which they are capable of. It is really a mystery why this team with experienced players have fared so badly. Up to now they still have failed to impress. Come on you Comets wake up and play ball. The game is down for 2.00 p.m. or Saturday.

Ding-Dong Battle

Immediately following, the Eagles meet the Undergrads from Pokfulam. A ding-dong battle of errors is expected with the team making less errors emerging victorious.

The Eagles' no-hitter M.L. Lau has not been seen in action this season but should he start

As for the Toreros it's the same old sad story -- too much enthusiasm, too little knowledge of the game. This bunch of girls are the keenest in the league and it is really disheartening to see them massacred week in, week out.

The lack of a suitable coach to guide them sticks out like a sore thumb. Keep the line show up and do not get downhearted and you will soon find yourselves ranking for the top.

Still Smarting

At 2.00 p.m. the jolting

Joys cross bats with Ed Carvalho's Seminoles. The Saints enjoy all round strength and should not meet with too much opposition from the youthful Seminoles. The Joys are still smarting over their humiliating defeat at the hands of the Carolines two short weeks ago and will be in force to take it out on the Seminoles.

The Seminoles are at last getting a grip of themselves as was shown when they thrashed the Pandas 9-4. The Indians are fast but lack batting power. If they get wise to Salich's deliveries early in the game the Saints may just find things going too smoothly.

Last week I had the pleasure to meet the former Chairman of the Hongkong Softball Association, who is on a world tour. I asked him what he thought of the standard of play now compared with the days gone by. He remarked that the standard had definitely gone down and it would take quite some time before it could reach great heights. On being asked why he should think so, he said the reason behind this was mainly because there are too few people who are really interested. He continued by saying that there was a considerable lack of experienced men to guide the up and coming youngsters and as a result many promising players decline even before they reach their peak.

Advice

I asked him what advice he would give and to this he said, "I would like to see the youngsters play softball as it should be played. They should play for their team's welfare and not to the stands. A grandstand player doesn't normally get very far. I have seen many such players in my days and I am sorry to say none of them got very far."

So to all the youngsters in Hongkong, I say, "set personal glory aside and you will achieve greater fame...." To all softballers, this is the very sound advice from a man who has been in the game long before many of us were born.

THE DUKE WRITES HIS MEMOIRS

THE Duke of Primo de Rivera, 54, Spain's former Ambassador to London, has been working for some months on his memoirs. Friends expect his book to be ready for publication soon.

It should make extremely interesting reading. For before he became ambassador he had led a colourful life. He was the younger son of General Primo de Rivera, one-time dictator of Spain, and he was imprisoned by the Republicans during the Spanish Civil War. Once he fought a duel with a man who criticised his father.

The duke is a Spanish grandee by birth, and has held a number of official posts under the Franco administration.

Now that the Greve-Bell separation case, in which he was named, has ended, the duke hopes to return to Spain soon.

And although it has been suggested that he might become Mayor of Madrid, he has told close friends that he has no intention of taking up any public post. He hopes to spend his time extremely quietly and unobtrusively either on his country estate or at his home in Madrid.

He is almost certain to return to his hobby of sculpting, at which he is extremely skilled.

LORD ST. JOHN OF BLETTSOE's cousin, Sir John, who returned from his £2,000-a-year post as a naval engineer commander last year, has become a £2,400-a-year Church of England curate.

Says Mr. St. John: "Something impelling urged me towards the ministry. I don't think I have made any sacrifices. I am a happy, contented man, and my wife and four daughters are happy. What more could anyone ask?"

ENGLAND'S BAD START

Meekiff, with one wicket for 15 runs after five overs, gave way to Ken Mackay, who opened with a maiden to May.

But he was reintroduced at the other end in place of Davidson, whose figures were 7-2-13-1 when he was rested.

All three bowlers this morning bowled to an attacking field, with three slips, a gully, a point, a short fine leg and a backward square leg off.

It was the third wicket for the erratic Meekiff for a total of 18 runs.

As O'Neill returned to the field at 75, Meekiff dismissed May with the first ball of his second over after lunch; caught by Groat for 29.

England lost another wicket at 83 for six wickets, when Evans was smartly taken by Burge at second slip to give Davidson this third wicket. Evans made only 4.—Reuter.

Caught Behind

Davidson broke the third wicket stand when he had Gravency caught behind by Groat for 10. The scoreboard then read 82 for three, Gravency's stand with his skipper having put on 40 valuable runs.

May, with a three off Davidson, sent the 50 up after England's innings had lasted 108 minutes.

May took four runs off Mackay in the first over after resumption, and Gravency next dangerously edged Davidson to the ropes to send the score to 44.

O'Neill left the field with an injured finger in the next over after diving full length to stop a ball from May. Bobby Simpson replaced him.
